I. Approval of the Agenda for the April 27, 2022 Meeting Robert Krebs

President Robert Krebs called the meeting to order at 3:04. The agenda was approved by acclamation.

II. Approval of the Minutes of the Meeting of March 30, 2022 Robert Krebs

The minutes were approved by acclamation.

III. Report of the Faculty Senate President Robert Krebs

Senate President Krebs reminded everyone that while many reports of standing committees have been submitted for the record, a few are still outstanding and should be submitted as soon as possible. President Krebs then recognized the Senate administrative assistant, Jane McCrone for her work in keeping the business of Senate running so effectively since she took on the position in November 2020. The senate officers presented her with flowers. Senator Krebs also thanked Rick Zhang for all his assistance running the AV component of Senate meetings over the past academic year.

Senate President Krebs then discussed the Board of Trustees' decision to appoint Provost Laura Bloomberg as the 8th President of Cleveland State. He observed that he discussed the matter thoroughly with the CSU Board of Trustees chair, David Reynolds, who explained that he and the other trustees felt it was best for the future of the university to offer the Provost the presidency rather than to appoint her as interim president; they recognize her tremendous administrative talent and they have full confidence in her success in this new role. President Krebs reported that the Board or Trustees also expects that CSU 2.0 and the college reorganization process will continue on schedule.

President Krebs advised that forming colleges should scrutinize the by-laws that are being drafted or approved as provisional—particularly in light of the forming of PRCs and the assignment of workloads. He finally alerted everyone to an important item to be introduced in New Business about the approval of the Department of Africana Studies.

IV. Report of the President of the University

Laura Bloomberg

Newly appointed President Bloomberg was greeted with an enthusiastic and lengthy round of applause. She began by recounting the humbling experience of a medical emergency she suffered on the morning that the Board of Trustees was voting to elect her CSU President. As she explained, this unexpected event reminds us that none of us can do more than we can in any given moment. She further pointed out that being president of a university is not just a job but a lifestyle and that she and her husband are “all in” on Cleveland. She confirmed that her intention, even her mantra of stewardship, is to leave this university in a better state than when she arrived. President Bloomberg also strives to lead each day in her life as an individual work of art to which she would be proud to put her signature; she promises to devote that level of energy and vision to Cleveland State each day.

President Bloomberg mentioned that the Board of Trustees parted ways with President Sands over “leadership differences”; she asserted that there is no “smoking gun.” She also publicly thanked former President Sands for having successfully led the university through the pandemic and for having hired fantastic cabinet administrators.

President Bloomberg then described where the university is on the path of achieving the aspirational vision of CSU 2.0. She reiterated that she is fully “on board” with CSU 2.0., including our current process of college realignment, which is central to achieving the larger goals of CSU 2.0 for the university and its role in the future of the region. President Bloomberg acknowledged that there is work to do over the summer; even at the moment of the “go live” date, the behind the scenes infrastructures for the new colleges will still be being built or transformed.

President Bloomberg then announced that the new forming college of A&S will officially be named The College of Arts and Sciences, a name apt for its core Aristotelian disciplines. The next new college will be named the College of Health, which signals to the community our vision for a broad understanding of health and well-being. The third new college will be named the College of Education and Public Affairs, emphasizing the idea of the polis, the people, and their public institutions. President Bloomberg is hopeful for a future Levin School of Urban Affairs within that new college. She stressed that this is not the time to “slow the process down.”

President Bloomberg then announced her decision to name Prof. Nigamanth Sridhar as interim provost. She then applauded the strength of the leadership team in the Provost’s office as well as her belief in the necessity of a fabric or network of leadership to support every leader.

One senator suggested that we may need another Senate meeting to vote on items from other forming colleges that did not receive adequate input from the prior Teams survey.

Motion First Reading(Report No. 30, 2021-2022)

- E. Summary of Changes and Changes to Faculty Personnel Policies 3344-13-01 through 3344-13-04

One senator raised a question for UFAC about balancing representation from within a college for standing committees where Steering appoints members from within a college (e.g. some committees would benefit from a balance in Art/Humanities and Science representatives).

Senator Mikelbank moved that a second member be added from A&S to the Student Success Committee; this was seconded by Senator Marino. This motion to add this phrase to the by-law changes that UFAC is making, carried by voice vote.

Senator Ekelman suggested that UFAC might want to assign membership of standing committees according to proportional relationships in faculty size. President Krebs then took a raise-of-hands “straw poll” about faculty preference on this matter; results were mixed.

VIII. Budget and Finance Committee Report

William Bowen

Budget and Finance chair William Bowen reported that the PFAC met on April 26, 2022, and discussed the costs of college realignment, among other items. Next year, he pointed out, PFAC will have an even more central role next year as its new mission incorporates faculty voice into the budgetary process in a systematic way.

Professor Bowen reported that former basketball coach Dennis Gates received no money other than what he was paid for this year from Cleveland State.

Professor Bowen, in closing, observed that in light of his imminent retirement, he wanted to express how much of an honor it has been for him to be involved in Faculty Senate for the last twenty-five years.

Senator Forte introduced a motion to amend, and delete the words following “which could...” Changing the comma to a period. Senator Hamilton seconded. The motion to revise the first motion in this way passed by 21 to 13.
